Should set with door closed for a week or so after installation to "seat" or you may think it is too thick.</li> <li>*Sometimes the smaller one works, However, rubber composition is thicker and harder so may still need trimmed down. I don't like this one much.</li> <li>*BEST is our new Hollow Core Seals, Solves most normal fit problems, made more like late model rubber, allows door to close &amp; seal properly.</li> <li>*Domed style, kind of a universal rubber, Dan uses it on trucks he builds with good success. You may need to double up in corners or bring it out more toward edge.</li> <li>*Econo rubber, others advertise and sell this cheaper seal, so we offer it as well. I do not list it here as it is, frankly, terrible, stinky, glue will not stick to it, yuck!!!!</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
